Friends,
As we enter fall and prepare for winter, we find ourselves harvesting the fruits of our summer labors. And, we have been busy! Our communications team is undertaking strategic steps to increase outreach through our online presence.

Our small team is refreshing our website. We first launched the Army Women’s Foundation webpage in 2007. As these seven years passed, we added more information to it as our work has grown. After a period of time, we have found that we need to improve its functionality.

You may have noticed the tremendous growth in the number of our Facebook followers. We’ve grown nearly eight fold over the past year! Yes, a year ago, at the start of September, we had 1,200 followers. Today, as I write this, we have more than 9,500 followers.

Not only are more people following our page, more people are engaging by commenting and sharing our Facebook stories with their friends. Each time they share one of our posts with their friends, more people learn about your achievements and the Foundation’s work that you support.

We’re using Facebook to celebrate achievements of our women soldiers and share news about national topics that affect our soldiers to help them stay informed.

On Throwback Thursdays, we draw attention to the rich history of women soldiers by posting some terrific photographs and highlighting the impact women had on our Army and our country. Please send us your photographs and stories to use.

We’re also showcasing our Legacy Scholars on Facebook. Once a week, we run a short profile of a scholar and encourage others to follow in their footsteps.

Besides expanding our online presence, we were busy growing in other areas.

When we launched our Legacy Scholarship program in 2008, we funded it with $5,000. During our last awards, announced in March 2014, we distributed $51,000 in scholarships.

This summer, our board took a bold step by voting to increase the Legacy Scholarship fund to $75,000! Our goal is to help more students fulfill their aspirations. The application process is now open. Please help us spread the word and direct students and parents to our website or our phone number to learn more about eligibility.

We’ll announce the winners in March at our annual symposium and Hall of Fame Awards program in Washington, D.C. Plans for those events are taking shape now. We look forward to reporting back to you in spring on the results of the symposium.

Truly, the work of the Army Women’s Foundation is only possible because of your support. On behalf of the Army Women’s Foundation, I thank you.

Warmest Regards,

Dee Ann McWilliams

The Bottom Line Question is Why Give?

When talk turns to charitable giving in the United States foundations and major corporations capture attention with well-publicized large gifts. However, in overall dollars of charitable giving, each year the largest amounts by far, are by concerned and dedicated individuals. These might be large gifts, small gifts, ‘planned’ gifts, bequests, periodic or single gifts to name a few. These gifts might be in response to direct mail, special interest or person-to-person. But these individual gifts and bequests add up to nearly 85% of charitable giving.

Corporate gifts can be significant, but these gifts are usually targeted at specific interests of the corporations. Gifts from foundations typically follow the same parameters in their charitable giving.

Who do individuals give to? First and foremost they give to religious organizations and institutions. For college grads, they give to their alma maters. But observers note that support human services. Many of these organizations are small and even a slight increase can be significant.

Other areas reported to be experiencing an increase in individual giving are environmental groups and those that support human services. Many of these organizations are small and even a slight increase can be significant.

To keep advancing our mission, we ask you to make a gift/contribution to the Army Women’s Foundation. The Army Women’s Foundation does not fit neatly into popular causes. So we have to prove that we are worthy recipients of individual giving and we believe we are doing that. Starting with the Foundation’s website and Facebook site, we have increased the number of our supporters exponentially. We have used donor funds wisely. This is reflected in our scholarship program, for example. From two scholarships in 2007, we expanded to 29 in 2014. We hear from grateful Army women every day.

No gift is too small or insignificant. Together with others, each gift can help to make a difference in our work to do more to help our Army women and to engage our nation about the service and sacrifice of Army women.

Volunteer:
1) a person who freely undertakes military service; 2) a person who performs a service willingly and without pay

Some women have served in the Army for decades. They have always freely undertaken their military service; they were never compelled to serve. They stepped forward on their own — they were volunteers.

Like each woman who raised her hand to serve in the Army, as Active Duty, Guard, or Reservists, the many women who support the work of the small staff of the Army Women’s Foundation continue that selfless spirit. They voluntarily perform service, and for the foundation, they do it without pay. Their compensation is in knowing they are helping others. Our Board of Directors, Advisory Board, Committee members are all unpaid volunteers.

They spend their time and energy and use their knowledge and creativity working for Army women, through our foundation. Most of our volunteers have served in Korea, Vietnam, Bosnia, Iraq, Afghanistan and elsewhere. Some of our volunteers have not served but want to give in some way to support and honor Army women. The spirit of volunteerism permeates our organization.

Over the years, the Army Women’s Foundation has had innumerable volunteers step up to the plate, saying, “I want to help move the mission forward.” Their contributions are significant. Without them, our Executive Director, and our small staff of part-time employees, we could not have accomplished all that has been accomplished.

Recent changes in our Board (more on that in a moment) prompted me to wonder if we thank these volunteers enough. So I want to take a moment to recognize and thank some of these special people. The list is long, so please forgive me for not including everyone!

During my term as Executive Director, we have been blessed with the service of Vicki Longnecker, Pat Jernigan, Sue Pierce, Sherry Russell, Janet Southby, Pat Sigel, Pat Foote, Arlene Greenfield and those currently serving on our Board of Directors and Advisory Board. I especially want to thank Dee McWilliams for helping to ‘advance’ AWF in so many ways.

We cannot do our work, move forward, find new sources of revenue and new ways to impact Army women without the vision of new volunteers, nor the tenacity and dedication of past and current volunteers.

Now the reason for this reflection on the word “volunteer.” Two ‘uber’ volunteers are cycling off our Board... not because they no longer wish to serve, but because of the bylaws. Retired Lieutenant Colonel Vicki Merriman and Mary Coleman Spring are two of the most dedicated women to serve on the Board. No project was too big, too time consuming or daunting for them to say NO. Their service to their country has been matched by their service in multiple capacities on our Board. I have seen their accomplishments. We have benefited from their labors, and I have seen them inspire others. Vicki, Mary, thank you! And thank you for agreeing to stay involved in other capacities.

I close this message with two requests of you, our supporters. If I have not identified a volunteer you know to have willingly contributed exceptional service to the Army Women’s Foundation, let me know. And if the service of others encourages you to follow their examples, please communicate your thoughts and availability. There are enough things to be done and ways to serve Army women for you to be involved.

Hoah Volunteers!

Peggy Trossen
Executive Director

LEGACY SCHOLARSHIPS — MAKING A DIFFERENCE

To help our Army women accomplish their educational goals, we have once again expanded the Legacy Scholarship Program — this year by increasing our program budget to $75,000!

The Foundation’s Legacy Scholarship Program is available to all Army women — active duty, retired, National Guard, Reserve and their lineal descendants. The Legacy Scholarship program offers financial support in four areas: Certificate programs, Community College coursework, Undergraduate Degrees, and Graduate Degrees. Scholarships are awarded only for coursework from accredited institutions and are based on merit, academic potential, community service, letters of recommendation, and need.

The Legacy Scholarships are available for tuition assistance for certification, coursework at community college level or four year academic institutions and graduate schools.
